The Educational and Research Foundation for the American Academy of Facial Plastic and Reconstructive Surgery

The Many Faces of Generosity

Facing the Future and Beyond
Facial plastic and reconstructive surgeons perform surgery to correct congenital, trauma-induced and oncologic disorders of the face, head, and neck as well as plastic surgery to improve a patient’s appearance.

Facial plastic surgeons are trained in residency programs accredited by the Accreditation Council for Graduate Medical Education (ACGME) and board-certified by appropriate boards affiliated with the American Board of Medical Specialties (ABMS) addressing facial plastic and reconstructive surgery.

Most facial plastic surgeons are initially trained and certified in the specialty of otolaryngology-head and neck surgery. Their post-graduate training includes five years of surgical residency, including a year of general surgery. Residency training typically occurs within a division of facial plastic and reconstructive surgery in the medical school’s department of otolaryngology.

Many facial plastic surgeons are also certified by the American Board of Facial Plastic and Reconstructive Surgery (ABFPRS).

“The future is to be able to access education online.”

Devinder S. Mangat, MD
The American Academy of Facial Plastic and Reconstructive Surgery (AAFPRS) was founded in 1964 and represents more than 2,700 facial plastic and reconstructive surgeons throughout the world. The AAFPRS is a National Medical Specialty of the American Medical Association (AMA). The AAFPRS holds an official seat in the AMA House of Delegates and on the American College of Surgeons board of governors. It is the only organization dedicated solely to the advancement of facial plastic and reconstructive surgery.

The AAFPRS is an autonomous professional society representing the specialty of facial plastic surgery. The mission of the AAFPRS is:

• To promote the highest quality facial plastic surgery through education, dissemination of professional information and the establishment of professional standards;

• To achieve understanding and recognition of the specialty of facial plastic surgery by the medical profession, hospitals, and other medical care entities, legislative and regulatory bodies and the public at large;

• To define facial plastic surgery as a specialty that requires intensive training and competence, embodies high ethical standards, artistic ideals, commitment to humanitarian service and a desire to enhance the quality of human life;

• To serves as the public’s information source on facial plastic surgery;

• To assist members in the practice of facial plastic and reconstructive surgery, guiding them in the delivery of high quality, cost-effective medicine and surgery.

“Research drives the innovation that ultimately translates into better patient care. The AAFPRS needs to position itself to be involved in these advancements by advocating the research our members have already done, nurturing younger members who are developing their research careers and encouraging residents interested in facial plastic surgery to consider the value in pursuing a career as a surgeon-scientist. This is an approach that has re-invigorated the other sub-specialties in academic otolaryngology and will for facial plastic surgery as well.”

Sam Peyvand Most, MD
In 1974, the Educational and Research Foundation for the American Academy of Facial Plastic and Reconstructive Surgery (AAFPRS Foundation) was created to address the medical and scientific issues and challenges which confront facial plastic surgeons.

The AAFPRS Foundation has grown over the years by serving the needs of the facial plastic surgeons and their patients. Significant strides have been made in our three focus areas: educational excellence, research and humanitarian programs.

Educational excellence has always been the focal point of the AAFPRS Foundation. We continue to serve members by providing scientific meetings that surgeons from around the globe attend. The AAFPRS Foundation has awarded significant funds to AAFPRS members who are performing cutting edge research that has advanced facial plastic and reconstructive surgery.

Nothing better illustrates the generous nature of our surgeons, and the valuable contributions they have made to the lives of so many deserving patients than the FACE TO FACE program. Initiated in early 1990s, FACE TO FACE International makes the educational exchange among facial plastic and reconstructive surgeons all over the world an integral part of its program.

FACE TO FACE: The Domestic Violence Project was created in 1994. Members volunteer to help victims of domestic abuse who cannot afford to receive treatment for facial injuries.

Finally, FACES OF HONOR, which began in 2009, offers pro bono medical and surgical expertise to veterans who have endured injuries to the face or neck. Our motivation is simple: to provide a “thank you” to the brave men and women who have served our country by offering what we have worked hard to achieve, our surgical expertise and skills as caring physicians.

The needs of the specialty are growing and the AAFPRS Foundation’s leadership is responding in an aggressive and proactive way by implementing a strategic plan that calls for enhancement of the AAFPRS Foundation’s resources.

“\textit{The FACE TO FACE programs of the AAFPRS are unique and substantially important to the identity of this distinctive organization. These programs represent the Academy’s deep sense of commitment to social responsibility and the service of mankind. Through these programs—the Domestic Violence Project, FACE TO FACE International, and FACES OF HONOR—our members volunteer their skills to restoring lives by restoring faces. We need to ensure ongoing financial and organizational support for these programs.}”

\textit{Harrison “Chris” Putman, III, MD}
MEETING THE NEEDS OF THE FUTURE
TARGETING THE CHALLENGES

A medical organization—such as the AAFPRS—that wishes to thrive in a competitive environment, must continually advance its specialty. The various programs of the Academy and the Foundation must grow to meet the needs of all facial plastic and reconstructive surgeons as well as the public.

The vision will require the unprecedented support of our members and corporations to maintain and expand our vital work. There will have to be Many Faces of Generosity to accomplish our vision. Seeking feedback from our members, we found that three important pillars emerged as to what should be our focus for the future: Educational Excellence, Research, and Humanitarian Programs.

EDUCATIONAL EXCELLENCE
On-line resources and education tools are the future! It offers participants flexibility and convenience. Often, it is less expensive to administer and can offer a variety of tools and programs that might not otherwise be easily accessible to our members. The AAFPRS believes that The New Face of Education for the Next Generation must have an on-line state-of-the-art education portal. It is critical to provide surgeons with the opportunity to continue their education and have access to a wealth of information on-line, which will ultimately benefit the patient and the specialty.

RESEARCH
One aspect of the mission of the AAFPRS is to promote the highest quality facial plastic surgery with a desire to improve the quality of human life. Our surgeons decide on which drugs to use and procedures to perform based on years of training and expert opinions. As patients become more savvy, they are demanding to know how a given physician’s results compares against professional benchmarks. In order to respond to this need, we will need to conduct research and provide peer-reviewed evidence, which looks beyond anecdotal experience and provides scientifically based evidence to support treatment decisions and recommendations. In addition, there is a need to support more evidenced-based studies for outcomes for facial plastic surgery to include procedures, products, devices, drugs, strategies, business models, etc. The AAFPRS has identified the need to establish a Research Center that will educate surgeons on the process of conducting quality research while providing funding to complete the essential research that will meet the needs of the specialty.
HUMANITARIAN PROGRAMS

FACE TO FACE: International makes the educational exchange among facial plastic and reconstructive surgeons all over the world an integral part of its program. Our surgeons are men and women who believe that a more lasting impact is made on communities when our FACE TO FACE teams work together with local medical personnel to manage an individual’s care. Mutual respect grows as different surgical approaches are discussed and demonstrated. In addition to providing “hands-on” training to our international colleagues, our volunteers exchange case analysis and share published information. This exchange of information, knowledge, and techniques is what contributes to the success of the program.

We need to enlist a FACE TO FACE coordinator to assist participating surgeons locate new host hospitals internationally, strengthen the FACE TO FACE: The National Domestic Violence Project, and build more bridges with veteran affiliates for FACES OF HONOR. In addition, to ensure that the public is aware of this incredible program, funding is needed to improve documentation, update our Web site and increase our public relations program to encourage more deserving individuals to find assistance.

The AAFPRS seeks to address the challenges facing the specialty by achieving the following goals:

- Assisting facial plastic and reconstructive surgeons in reaching their educational goals, ultimately improving the level of patient care delivered;
- Offering cutting edge professional development opportunities for facial plastic and reconstructive surgeons;
- Securing funding to sustain important, relevant and evidence-based research initiatives; and
- Seeking support to continue and enhance the FACE TO FACE program to take it to the next level.

The Educational and Research Foundation for the American Academy of Facial Plastic and Reconstructive Surgery is accepting a leadership role in addressing these areas by launching a major multi-phased funding initiative. The AAFPRS Foundation, partnering with the corporate leaders from industry and members of the AAFPRS, will obtain the funds to: ensure new and exciting educational tools, support evidenced-based and relevant research initiatives, and elevate FACE TO FACE programs to the next level.
AN INVESTMENT IN THE FUTURE OF THE ACADEMY,
ITS MEMBERS AND THE PROFESSION

The AAFPRS and the AAFPRS Foundation leadership recognize that the specialty of facial plastic and reconstructive surgery is at a critical juncture. The Many Faces of Generosity campaign is an investment in the future of the profession. It is the AAFPRS’ national fundraising campaign to build the Foundation as the premier center for education, teaching, research and humanitarian efforts.

The goal of the campaign is to raise $4 million invested and paid over the next five years. This critical initiative will position the AAFPRS Foundation to meet the needs of facial plastic and reconstructive surgeons today, tomorrow, and in the future. This unprecedented undertaking seeks to generate financial support for initiatives that will address three core areas of need: educational excellence, research, and humanitarian programs.

EDUCATIONAL EXCELLENCE
The New Face of Education for the Next Generation

Imagine being able to complete a required CME course from your office or home! Or possibly attend a webinar where AAFPRS members are demonstrating surgery techniques with new products. We will set aside $1.5 million to support this exciting venture!

The AAFPRS aims to be at the forefront of on-line education by developing a web-based education and information portal that will provide members with access to training and information as they need it, not just when it is available. We are convinced that having information at your fingertips is “the new face on education.”

This portal will be accessible to members and will provide the tools, training and information required by surgeons to stay current in their field, to interact with other surgeons and industry partners in the facial plastic and reconstructive surgery profession. Funds received will be used to design, develop, implement, and maintain the portal.

Some elements of the portal will include:
- On-line CME Courses
- Results of research projects and surveys
- AAFPRS meeting summaries
- Virtual workshops and meetings
- Access to company Web sites
- Articles written by members
- John Dickinson Memorial Library of DVDs
- Core lectures on rhinoplasty, hair, etc. will be on-line
- Access for international peers around the globe
RESEARCH

Changing Our Culture Through Research and Evidence-Based Medicine

The Academy is seeking $2 million in funding to expand our research efforts beyond our current grant programs. This includes providing to members academic training in the quantitative and methodological principles of clinical research design, research management and statistical analysis. Why?

- We need to develop an evidence-based approach to aesthetic as well as functional and reconstructive surgery. On-line research, reporting, patient tracking tools that can be employed to demonstrate the value of the care provided, performance and practice. This is important for improving patient care and increasingly important for insurance authorization.
- Research provides the foundation for advancement in medicine. As an Academy, we need to be at the forefront of this innovation.
- Research provides a venue for scientific collaboration with industry.
- Development of young investigators at academic institutions increases our stature within the medical community.

The Academy is dedicated to improving patient outcomes and we seek to change our culture through relevant research and evidence-based medicine.

HUMANITARIAN PROGRAMS

Launching FACE TO FACE to New Heights

The Academy intends to utilize $500,000 of the funds to invest in launching the program to new heights. This capital campaign effort, along with funds invested from our previous campaign, will help achieve our vision to provide physicians with the operational support and leadership for focused trips and to encourage them to participate in one or more of the programs. To accomplish this lofty objective, a program coordinator will be hired by the AAFPRS Foundation to assist us with our goals.

- Organize and provide process for the program
- Build relationships with host hospitals and physicians
- Coordinate activities to assist doctors
- Improve public awareness of program through various outlets

In the first five years after the FACE TO FACE program coordinator is in place, our goals will include:

- FACE TO FACE: International will have 25+ active missions.
- FACE TO FACE: The National Domestic Violence Project will have 500 referrals per year.
- FACES OF HONOR will have 200 referrals per year.

Our goal, through improved support, is to encourage more surgeons to participate in this exceptional program and to have the public be more aware of the FACE TO FACE program. Ultimately, the patients are the beneficiary of the skill and expertise of our participating members.
WE ARE BUILDING ON PAST ACCOMPLISHMENTS

• Accredited CME meetings for facial plastic and reconstructive surgeons
• Archives of Facial Plastic Surgery, an international peer-viewed journal published six times a year; part of the AMA’s family of JAMA Journals
  ➢ Promotes the art and science of facial plastic surgery
  ➢ Promotes the education and contributions of physicians worldwide
  ➢ Provides a forum to present important and relevant issues in ethics and public policy
• The AAFPRS Fellowship Program, with over 40 fellowships is widely respected by the medical community and represents the finest post-graduate program in the world for the training of facial plastic and reconstructive surgeons
• Research Grants—Two $5,000 Bernstein Resident Research Grants, one $15,000 Bernstein Investigator Development Grant and one $25,000 Bernstein Grant may be awarded yearly
• John T. Dickinson Memorial Library with more than 275 top quality surgical DVDs available to our members
• The Academy owns its headquarters building in Alexandria, VA
• The American Board of Facial Plastic and Reconstructive Surgery (ABFPRS)
  ➢ The AAFPRS assisted in the establishment of the ABFPRS in 1986 to improve the quality of medical and surgical treatment available to the public by examining for professional expertise
• FACE TO FACE founded in 1992
  ➢ International, a humanitarian and educational surgical exchange program. Surgeons provide complimentary care to those who suffer from facial deformities caused by birth or trauma
  ➢ Domestic Violence Project, the first surgical group to take a firm stand and become involved in assisting individuals of domestic violence break the cycle
  ➢ FACES OF HONOR, added in 2009, offers pro-bono medical and surgical expertise to veterans who have received face or neck injuries
NATIONAL STEERING COMMITTEE

I had a dream as president to create financial independence for the AAFPRS. Jonathan Sykes and I have shared that common goal. The Many Faces of Generosity Campaign is a vision that began to take shape over three years ago. It was apparent to me that if the Academy was to continue to grow to meet the needs of the membership that we would need to outline an aggressive, innovative set of programs that could take the AAFPRS into the future. I am overwhelmed, touched, and so grateful for the outpouring of financial support provided by those individuals who have helped launch this campaign.

Through a series of conversations, leadership defined a path that included soliciting feedback from key members of the Academy as well as industry to identify focus areas that helped to define our charge, being that of educational excellence, relevant research, and evidence-based medicine and launching our FACE TO FACE Programs to New Heights.

The goal to expand our efforts in the area of research is critical to ensure that patients receive the very best care possible. Research provides the foundation for advancement in medicine. Our vision is to be at the forefront by providing members with the necessary training to conduct relevant research that will result in improving patient outcomes, while at the same time providing a venue for scientific collaboration with industry.

Education is the backbone of our Academy, and with this capital campaign you are promoting, projecting, and enhancing that backbone. By future-proofing this organization, the mainstay of our educational excellence, we are insuring our permanence in organized medicine forever. To quote a dear friend and colleague, Dr. Bobby Simons, "We are here to stay."

I challenge every member of the American Academy of Facial Plastic and Reconstructive Surgery to participate in this extraordinary effort to raise a minimum of $4 M in support of the vision to take the Academy into the future and beyond. If every member would consider contributing the result of one day’s surgical procedures per year of pledge to the campaign effort, we would far exceed our goal! Please join me and the entire National Steering Committee for The Many Faces of Generosity campaign by making a contribution to this important project to ensure our future, and that of the next generation. Thank you all so much!

Education remains the most important role of the AAFPRS. Our educational efforts began with outstanding regional and national courses, and have evolved to include fundamental training in all otolaryngology residency training programs, and a post-residency fellowship program that provides world-class training.

The goals of the AAFPRS continue to be to provide excellent educational programs to its members, to promote and advance our humanitarian programs, and to improve the level of care and safety that we provide to our patients. In order to accomplish these goals, the academy must have the necessary funds to improve educational programs, to expand our humanitarian efforts, and to assist members in designing studies to ask and answer relevant scientific questions.

The Capital Campaign will ensure our viability and safeguard our future. The goals of the campaign are to provide funds to upgrade our educational programs, allow evidenced-based research within the AAFPRS to improve patient outcomes and safety, and to advance our humanitarian program (FACE TO FACE). AAFPRS on-site courses are already first-rate, but financial resources are required to expand web-based portals for education and other on-line educational opportunities for members. Our FACE TO FACE humanitarian program is already composed of caring, empathetic members. However, it lacks the personnel and funding to carry it to the next level—a financially self-sustaining portion of our organization that has national and international recognition. In order to achieve this recognition, FACE TO FACE must have the financial resources required to create name recognition and international prominence. Additional monies will allow the AAFPRS to create a research entity that performs independent evidenced based studies that impact our treatment algorithms and create value to industry.

The future of the AAFPRS is bright. We are composed of members who value teaching and helping others. I am proud to be an AAFPRS member and to co-chair the Capital Campaign. I ask each AAFPRS member to give to this campaign and to invest in our future.
M. Eugene Tardy, Jr., MD
Honorary Chair

Education is the founding principle of the AAFPRS. When our visionary founders sought to define the future of facial plastic surgery, unbiased and freely open education ruled their thinking. AAFPRS leadership over the decades has reinforced and refined this inalterable principle. Continuing medical education, audiovisual enhancements and high quality courses and programs bring contemporary facial plastic surgery techniques and philosophy to surgeons worldwide, without restriction. A fundamental goal of many of us early on was to position a fully-trained facial plastic surgeon in every academic otolaryngology program in America, a goal that has largely been attained. Resident education benefits immensely from this presence.

Thus the empowerment of facial plastic surgery—through the unstinting efforts of the AAFPRS—continues apace. Changes in the medical landscape, particularly as related to funding from external sources, demand that we identify and seek reliable revenues to ensure resource constancy in the form of an endowment to respond to new challenges, further our educational mission to physicians and patients, and secure and guide the education and research necessary for future generations.

Join us in this effort. As our forebears made it possible for us to enjoy success in a highly satisfactory field of endeavor, let us give back and leap forward.

Ted A. Cook, MD
Honorary Chair

The founders of the American Academy of Facial Plastic and Reconstructive Surgery over 50 years ago were driven to educate themselves by a totally unfettered and completely open exchange of ideas. They constantly challenged one another without being inhibited by strong individual egos. And they used these educational exchanges to stimulate interest from and teach the generation, our generation, which followed them.

Our generation took up the challenge of providing education in facial plastic and reconstructive surgery in every otolaryngology-head and neck surgery residency program in the U.S., of creating a solid and highly respected post-residency Fellowship Training Program in facial plastic and reconstructive surgery, and providing two mechanisms (the International Federation of Facial Plastic Surgery Societies and the Archives of Facial Plastic Surgery) to openly spread the teaching of facial plastic and reconstructive surgery around the world. We have accomplished these three things with solid success.

The essential next step to provide for continued growth of facial plastic and reconstructive surgery requires a broad and strong development platform. This endowment is needed to provide:

1. Fiscally independent continuing CME programs to keep members abreast of rapidly extending advances in techniques and support "equipment". This independent fiscal foundation is vital in times of decreasing member income and weakened industry support for CME.

2. Expanded support for research to extend our knowledge base and understanding is vital. There are virtually no funds for facial plastic and reconstructive surgery research available from governmental agencies.

3. We must provide an endowment based foundation to enhance growth of our already well developed FACE TO FACE program reaching out to unserved patients in the U.S. and lesser developed countries and educating and exchanging knowledge with surgeons in these countries.

Keith A. LaFerriere, MD
President’s Club Chair

I was honored to be asked to chair the President’s Club Committee for The Many Faces of Generosity campaign. When one reviews our beginnings in 1964 and looks now at where we proudly are in 2011, we should pause and take a moment to reflect the Academy’s many accomplishments, such as education and patient safety. However, no individual or Academy should ever rest on their laurels. For that reason this campaign is essential to ensure that funds are available to continue educational excellence, research, and bringing our humanitarian programs to the next level.

As an Academy we must be the leader in disseminating information with an on-line, state-of-the-art educational portal that will draw the most talented and brightest residents and fellows to our ranks. We must also make available educational materials to surgeons around the globe, who would not normally have access to our scientific meetings. The world is getting smaller and we should be a beacon to many.

Now is the time to commit. My hope is that all past presidents will be dedicated to this worthwhile endeavor. We are well on our way!
Andrew C. Campbell, MD

In the ever increasingly competitive environment we all practice in, I think it is imperative that the AAFPRS be financially strong so that we can not only help our members, but also we can reach out and assist those that need our assistance the most through our humanitarian program FACE TO FACE.

Neil A. Gordon, MD
Leadership Gift Co-chair
The significance of the AAFPRS to our specialty, facial plastic surgery, cannot be underestimated. In the competitive world that we live, our voice is heard because the AAFPRS, as our sole national medical society, represents the interests of facial plastic surgeons in the medical community as well as the political and regulatory arena. Our commitment to the highest standards in education, research and humanitarian programs defines our mission.

Supporting The Many Faces of Generosity campaign is supporting the goals of the AAFPRS which will enable facial plastic surgeons as individuals and as a group to continue to define excellence in our specialty. I am proud that I can support these goals.

Andrew A. Jacono, MD
Leadership Gift Co-chair
My passion for the FACE TO FACE program has led me to volunteer my services not only in this country, but also abroad. I was in grade school when I sat next to a girl who had a cleft lip. I noted with alarm and sadness the ostracism and cruel teasing she received due to the facial deformity. Shortly thereafter, the girl had reconstructive surgery which, after healing, resulted in new confidence in social situations and turned her life around for the better. My career path was set -- I wanted to help individuals who were in need of reconstructive surgery.

The FACE TO FACE program assists children abroad who have facial deformities and it also helps individuals whose lives have been shattered due to domestic violence. We must not forget our FACES OF HONOR program which assists our valiant men and women in the United States Armed Forces. Let us never forget their sacrifices for us!

FACE TO FACE is why I choose to support this Capital Campaign. It’s time to bring the program to the next level.

Richard Linder, President/CEO, PCA SKIN
Corporate Co-chair
PCA SKIN® has been a proud supporter of AAFPRS and its research grants, humanitarian programs, Founders Club and members’ practices for more than 17 years. As a strong advocate for education and the continuous quest for knowledge, we deeply appreciate the AAFPRS members who dedicate their lives to pursuing educational excellence--a key component in developing a successful, cutting-edge practice.

We understand the importance of staying ahead of the curve in this constantly evolving industry, and we look forward to continuing our partnership with AAFPRS, making education one of the fundamental elements of patient care.

Edwin F. Williams, III, MD
Corporate Co-chair
The decision to contribute really did not require much thought at all. I am extremely grateful to those who have worked so hard and who came before us. I feel honored to be able to contribute to ensure the success of our next generation.

Daniel E. Rousso, MD
Member Co-chair
The Academy has been the single most important factor in the success of my career - from the inception of my residency over 30 years ago, through my AAFPRS sponsored fellowship, the multiple courses that I directed over the years, my AAFPRS presidency and especially my practice today. I cannot imagine reaching this point without the AAFPRS.
Cynthia M. Gregg, MD
Advanced Gifts Chair
The Many Faces of Generosity campaign emphasizes increased education, evidence-based research and humanitarian efforts. I find new Web-based educational programs to be particularly innovative and forward thinking. Opportunities for continuing education will expand to include meeting videos and webinars that will be available on the academy’s education portal. This should dramatically increase the accessibility and convenience of continuing education for all.

Shan R. Baker, MD
Special Gifts Chair
Contributing to The Many Faces of Generosity campaign is an investment in your future as a facial plastic surgeon because it ensures the continued excellence of our Academy’s education, humanitarian, and research programs.
Our humanitarian programs will be enhanced with increased funding and logistical support to facilitate physician outreach. Humanitarian work is an important facet of our academy’s mission. Please join us in supporting the AAFPRS as we strive to better serve our members through this capital campaign.

William H. Truswell, MD
Member Co-chair
The goal of the present campaign is to secure that future. We will bring excellence of education into the 21st Century with a Web-based portal for instruction, virtual courses, physician interactions, and more. Research is fundamental for the advancement of medical knowledge and to improve patient outcomes, both cosmetic and reconstructive, through evidence-based care. Humanitarian outreach, taking care of the less fortunate at home and abroad, is part of our calling as physicians. Our Academy takes care of us. We must take care of our Academy.

Harrison C. Putman, III, MD
Major Gifts Chair
The history of the AAFPRS has a consistent underlying theme of a small but unique organization surmounting repeated challenges and rising to ever higher levels of achievement. This Academy has been blessed with a continual stream of talented members and leaders whose goals have been unchanged since its inception. These include excellence in education and research, humanitarian endeavors, membership strength, and financial stability.

The Many Faces of Generosity Campaign seeks to solidify the future of this exemplary organization through its focus on three defined pillars. We can all demonstrate our leadership by supporting this worthy cause on behalf of the American Academy of Facial Plastic and Reconstructive Surgery.

Shan R. Baker, MD
Special Gifts Chair
Contributing to The Many Faces of Generosity campaign is an investment in your future as a facial plastic surgeon because it ensures the continued excellence of our Academy’s education, humanitarian, and research programs.

The AAFPRS is the only national medical society solely representing facial plastic surgeons in organized medicine, governmental regulatory bodies and public forums. Our Academy has always been there for us and we must be there for the Academy by taking an active role in supporting the AAFPRS.
